A dangling modifier is a word or phrase that describes something, but the subject is missing or unclear.

Example (Dangling Modifier):

After finishing the homework, the TV was turned on.

Who finished the homework? → subject → the TV?
Nothing to modify – it sounds like the TV finished the homework.

Correction (Not Dangling):

After finishing the homework, she turned on the TV.

Who finished the homework? → subject → she
Now the modifier clearly describes the correct subject ("she").

3. Check the subject right after the phrase.
4. Compare both subjects – if they don't match, the modifier dangles.

There are two primary ways to fix a dangling modifier and make the sentence's meaning clear:
